PIANO OWNING CONTEST CLOSES AT 9 O'CLOCK SATURDAY NIGHT

Everybody interested in a Candidate Should Advantage of Voting Immediately.

Judges Have Been Selected to Make the Final of Ballots—All Candidates Must Take Heed to Regulations Contained in This Issue.

Committee of Judges: The gentlemen to compose the Board of Judges and who will make the final count of the ballots are Mr. W. T. Waller, Mayor of Napanee, Mr. G. P. Reiffenstein, Manager of Dominion Bank, Mr. R. G. H. Travers, Manager of Northern Crown Bank.

These are well-known and estimable gentlemen, and the public may rely upon their decision as being strictly in accordance with the ballot cast, without fear or favor.

The Express Piano Owning Contest is drawing to a close, only remain in which to secure the votes that will name the winner of the Newcombe Piano. The contest will close at 9 o'clock Saturday night.

Candidates should be busy lining up their friends for the final and impressing upon them that votes are needed now or never.

Don't overlook those people who, upon giving you a subscription in the contest, said, if your efforts warranted it, they would add a vote to the subscription already given.

These subscription votes are big counters, as a second subscription means about twice as many votes. Say a party gave you a subscription year which entitled you to 500 votes, should this same party add year's subscription to the first one, 1500 votes will be allowed upon the payment, being the difference between 500 votes as allowed on a new subscription and the 2000 allowed on a payment for two years, according to the schedule of votes governing the Contest.

It will be seen by this arrangement that should a candidate be in doubling up on all subscriptions received thus far it would mean a increased vote of 200 per cent of their present vote standing.

The remaining few hours should be filled with the greatest activity on the part of the candidates entered in the Piano Owning Contest.

It does not take much reasoning to reach the conclusion that it will be well to turn every available subscription between now and 9 p. m.

Candidates in every section should be scurrying hither and gathering in all promises of subscriptions made them early in the contest and they should not stop at that, but should continue among their friends alike.

The last vote announcement to be made by the Contest Manager in this issue of the Express, and contains all the votes received up to date. All votes received afterward and up to the close of the contest at 9 o'clock Saturday night will be counted by the Judges.

The ballot-box will be sealed and locked early Saturday morning and the keys surrendered to the Chairman of the Judges.

The special coupons issued on paid-in-advance subscriptions deposited in the ballot-box by the contestants, to be counted by the Judges. Now is the time to brace yourself for the final struggle by securing 100 votes for the finish.

All votes received Saturday and up to the close of the contest at urday night will be counted by the Judges.

The ballot-box will be sealed and locked early Saturday morning and the keys surrendered to the Chairman of the Judges.

The special coupons issued on paid-in-advance subscriptions posited in the ballot-box by the contestants, to be counted by Now is the time to brace yourself for the final struggle by securing for the finish.

There will be disappointments—that is inevitable. No more than the Express Management that everybody cannot win a then if there were to be rewards for everybody the spirit of competition not be developed. If it were not for that spirit there would be no contests of the traits which have been brought out during the struggle for an object.

Candidates should see that their vote standing as published issue is correct—and if not immediately notify the Contest Department this total will be used as a basis to which the ballots cast on Saturday added, and this added vote will name the winner. The result of the of the Judges will be final and conclusive.

Another regulation which the Contest Department will insist the last night is that candidates look after their own votes. They held to see that their vote coupons are correct and they must see deposited either by themselves or some friend. In this manner the Manager will be relieved of considerable additional work and the cl will be greatly facilitated. Candidates will see that they receive coupon for the number of votes they bring in on that night, and w tend to depositing them in the ballot-box before the Judges break make the final count. Therefore candidates can readily understand importance of getting them in early in order to facilitate matters.

Notes on the Ontario His- torical Society Annual Meeting.

The replies already received from the delegates assure an attendance of more than double the number that attended the meeting in Brantford last year. Five of the Past Presidents of the Society will be here and nearly all the present officers. Most of the guests will arrive by the noon trains on Wednesday.

A special committee of the young ladies of the town, with Miss Helen Grange as chairman, will act as reception and information committee.

The general public will be welcomed at all of the meetings.

The final edition of the program is now ready for distribution. Copies may be secured at the stores of Messrs. Wallace and Hooper.

A souvenir edition of the program will be issued at Historical Hall on Wednesday afternoon.

Special consignments of books on Canadian History will be found at the stores of Messrs. Henry and Paul.

During the convention a special souvenir post card will be on sale at the stores.

The United Empire Loyalist chapter of the I.O.D.E., is to erect a memorial tablet in Historical Hall to commemorate the Centennial of the War of 1812 and the fact that this will be the first celebration of the centennial held in Canada. The tablet will be unveiled on Wednesday afternoon by the Regent, Mrs. A. T. Harshaw.

It is hoped that as many Napanee people as possible will attend the excursion on and dinner on Friday in order to show our visitors our appreciation of the honor conferred on us by the selection of our town as a meeting place for 1912. The price of tickets, 75c each, includes the water trip and the dinner. They may be secured from any of the following committee: Messrs. Flach, Hooper, Wallace, Reiffenstein, Checkley and Travers. As the Adolphustown ladies wish to know how many to cater for you will confer a great favor by securing your tickets as early as possible.

Every resident of Napanee is requested to decorate in some manner with flags for Wednesday, Thursday and Friday next. The Government at Ottawa has given orders to have the Post Office suitably decorated for these days. The town is to build a handsome evergreen arch on John street at the intersection of Dundas street, and many of the merchants will have their places of business decorated.

The way in which our citizens have come forward and shown their interest in the approaching convention and their willingness to aid in every possible way is a decided credit to the town and will bring it to the very favorable attention of the entire Province.

Linked by Fate

BY CHARLES GARVICE

Author of "The Verdict of the Heart," "A Heritage of Hate," "Nell of Shorne Mills," "Paid For," "A Modern Juliet," Etc.

With deliberate movements he locked the door, saw that the ventilator was tightly closed, then lifted the iron cover from the pot on the furnace. A subtle, penetrating fume arose and filled the sombre room; the air became thick and palpable.

Protected as he was by the muslin soaked in the antidoting solution he was conscious of a heavy pressure on the lungs and heart, pressure that seemed almost intolerable. But he displayed no fear or dismay; indeed, a smile of triumph shone in his eyes.

"It is the Borgia fume!" he murmured behind his muslin mask, as the atmosphere grew thicker, more dense; a cry pierced the silence. It was a moan, a piteous moan, from the cat which had sprung upon the table and was crouching there looking at Julian entreatingly.

"Puss, poor puss!" he murmured, a cruel, pitiless light in his eyes. "You don't feel well, eh? No wonder! You can't breathe in this atmosphere? I'm not surprised. But it is going to be worse!"

Protected by the muslin bandage, he went to her and stroked her, and the wretched animal dropped on its side and waited to him imploringly.

"Nearly gone, eh?" he said. "Let us see what a stronger dose will do."

He glided to the furnace and stirred the compound; the fumes grew thicker, denser, and the cat, with a spasmodic jerk of all her limbs, fell prone on the table, her claws extended, her mouth wide open.

Julian went to her and turned her over.

"Dead!" he said. "Dead, quite dead. It was a pity you stayed, pussy! But it would have killed a man, to say nothing of a cat—" He stopped suddenly with his eyes fixed on the unfortunate cat. "It would have killed a man, unless he were protected as I am. Killed a man!"

He took up the cat and examined it closely. It was rigid with death, its eyes staring open, its teeth showing.

"No one could withstand it," he muttered. "A cat has nine lives, so they say, a man only one. Poor puss!"

Suddenly he started. There had come a knock at the door. He stood staring above his bandage from the cat to the door. Then he caught up the dead animal, tossed it unceremoniously into a cupboard, opened the ventilator to its widest, removed the protective muslin from his face and, after watching the fumes disappear through the ventilator, opened the door.

"Oh, it's you, Vane," he said, casually. "Come in."

"Phew!" said Vane. "What an infernal stink! What on earth have you been doing?"

"Only an experiment, quite an ordinary experiment," answered Julian.

wander to and fro for hours without meeting a fellow human being; and it was here she found the plot of her new play and worked out its characters and scenes, coming home in the afternoon to put the thing on paper. During these hours she was almost happy; it was at night, as she tried to sleep, and in the early hours of the morning when she lay awake counting them as they were boomed by Big Ben, who hath no pity upon the sick and the sleepless who lie within hearing of his loud and insistent tongue, that her unsatisfied heart cried, "I am ahungered; give me food!"

Now and again she stole to her seat at the back of the upper circle at the Momus and looked at her little play, and of course she saw its many faults more plainly each visit, and learned the lesson which can only be learned by these faults of ours.

Sometimes she stayed to the end of the musical piece and went round to the stage door to wait for Polly; and one night she had what Polly would have called an adventure.

She was standing in the passage near the doorkeeper's den, the piece was just over and some of the men and women already leaving the theatre. As a rule they were all too tired or too much engaged in talking and laughing among themselves to notice her as she stood in a corner, but to-night a super, who had been drinking, caught sight of her and, stopping, eyed her with a tipsy smile.

"Waiting for me, miss?" he asked.

Nina glanced towards the glass box, but the man had gone away for a moment. She turned her head away as if she had not heard, but the fatuous young fellow approached her with what he considered an ingratiating smile and offered his arm.

"Come along with me," he said. "Come outside where we can talk, miss."

Before he could say another word or touch her, there came a light, firm step along the passage, and a gentleman hurried down it. He was a young man, with a handsome and pleasant face, in which a pair of frank and boyish blue eyes were the most noticeable feature. They were quick, as well as good-looking eyes, and he saw, in a moment, what was going on. Without a word his hand fell on the man's shoulder and he swung him round towards the doorway as if he were a skittle, and not a heavy one at that. The man looked round with an angry oath, but it died on his lips, and with a sullen "All right, my lord!" he went unsteadily on his way.

The young fellow was about to follow, when, hesitatingly, he stopped and raised his hat.

"I'm afraid the man was making himself a nuisance," he said, and his voice was as frank and pleasant as

"I'm sorry it should have been—"

Lord Sutcombe nodded out again. His rooms were on the first floor of the Court on the East side, and all the way he thought of Wood with a persistence annoyed him.

"A beautiful girl—and a girl ought not to be hanging stage-door. Miss Wood-brother must be a gentleman that's not in any way that first piece is full of and the touches of a cult. Should like to see him. Whether Harcourt knows them—him—than he pretended."

CHAPTER XVII.

Success is sweet, we are told, but the sweet was embittered to Nina by the sight of Judith at the theatre, though she tried to be grateful to the Providence which had rescued her from poverty, given her so good a friend as Polly, and, ah, best of all, provided work for her.

Blessed work! The curse which we have changed into a blessing; and not more blessed to any man than the artist, whose one prayer, after he has finished one task, is, "Give me strength for the next!"

Nina sprang at Mr. Harcourt's suggestion that she should write a long play, and she set to work at it at once with feverish energy; for she knew that only by brain toil, the toil the artist delight in, could she escape from brooding over the past and the fate that had linked her to a man who was in love with the beautiful creature she had seen in the box at the theatre.

But if Nina's joy was dimmed, Polly's shone brightly.

"I can see your future as plainly as one of those fortune-telling people in Bond Street," she declared solemnly to Nina. "You are going to be a famous authoress and play writer like—" She mentioned two or three of the ladies who have scored success as dramatists and so broken the spell which has so long rested upon women writers for the stage. "You are going to be famous, Decima. Why, you are famous, already! Haven't you had most wonderful notices; and aren't the stalls almost full when the first piece begins? A thing unheard of till 'The Betrothed.' And wouldn't you like to have better rooms, and have a maid of your own, like Miss Tracey?"

But Nina shook her head and laughed.

"No, no, Polly. Let us go on as we are. Who knows? This next play may be a failure, and then—then we should have to go back to the millinery business."

"Not you! You've seen the last of bonnet-building!" retorted Polly, confidently. "But, oh, I do hope you won't be so silly and wicked as to overwork yourself. You are looking pale and thin—no, it's no use your denying it; I can see quite plainly. You don't take enough exercise; and I'm sure you want it. I've read somewhere that literary people ought to spend nearly all their time in the open air."

"You're thinking of consumptives. I fancy, Polly," said Nina; but she knew there was sound sense in the suggestion, and she went out more frequently.

There are worse places in the early autumn than the London parks—one sometimes wonders whether Londoners are as intimate with those parks as they ought to be—and Nina found, in this, the dead season, that they were almost as lonely as a country lane. There is one part of Hyde Park—which wild horses shall not induce me to indicate—where one could follow, when, hesitating, he stopped and raised his hat.

"I'm afraid the man was making himself a nuisance," he said, and his voice was as frank and pleasant as his eyes. "You—you have not been frightened, I hope?"

"Not in the very least," Nina replied. "He had only spoken a few words before you came up. But I am very much obliged to you for sending him away."

She did not color, or seem a whit embarrassed, but met his gaze of frank but quite respectful interest with the conventional ease which is the lady's birthright.

"I am very glad," he said, in the tone in which one addresses an equal. "Are you waiting for anyone? Shall I go back and bring them up?"

"No, thanks," said Nina. "I am waiting for—ah, here she comes!"

He looked round and saw Polly hurrying down the passage.

"Oh, Miss Bainsford!" he said, and he raised his hat. Then he added, after a pause: "This lady might wait in the green-room, Miss Bainsford."

"Oh, thank you, my lord!" said Polly, gratefully.

"Thank you," Nina also said, "but I shall not come again."

He raised his hat once more and left them.

"Well?" said Polly as they got into the cab. "Aren't you going to ask who that was?"

"I wasn't, but I will," said Nina with a smile. "Whoever he is, he was very kind. A stupid man spoke to me and—"

"Lord Sutcombe knocked him down! It's just what he would do!"

"It's just what he didn't do, I'm glad to say," said Nina, smiling. "That would have been too severe a punishment for a piece of unconscious impertinence."

Polly stared at her. "Lor! I should have thought you'd have been glad if he'd done it! What a strange girl you are! But I see! Of course you wouldn't like the fuss. Yes; that was Lord Sutcombe. He's the son of an earl or a duke, or something."

"And what may a son of a duke be doing behind the scenes at the Momus?" asked Nina, but without any great interest.

"Oh, they say he's backing Mr. Harcourt—got a share in the theatre. And he's fond of the stage; there's a good many swells like him; they're never happy unless they're behind. But he's not a stage-struck idiot like some of them. He's a gentleman, and all right, and doesn't spend his time flirting with every girl about the place. Didn't 'The Betrothed' go well to-night, dear? Did you hear the hand I got in that last speech of mine? And the 'House Full' boards were up quite early. Oh, how glad I shall be when the new play's finished! If you'd tell me what the man was like, I'd get Mr. Harcourt to discharge him."

"Then I certainly shan't tell you," said Nina. "Don't think any more of it. It won't happen again."

Lord Sutcombe walked away from the theatre briskly, but suddenly he stopped, and, with a gesture of impatience, strode back.

"Who was the young lady who was waiting for Miss Bainsford?" he asked of the doorkeeper.

"That was Miss Wood, sister of the author of the first piece, my lord," he replied. "I've heard that one of the supers has been annoying her. I'd only turned my back for a moment. I'll find out who it was, my lord—"

"No matter," said his lordship. "For the future take Miss Wood to the little room adjoining the green-room."

"Yes, my lord," said the man.

CHAPTER XVIII.

Sutcombe said no more about Ni- na, but, like the famous parrot, he thought a great deal; and he found it imperatively necessary to go down to the theatre very often; one knows that business must be attended to. But though he hovered about the stage entrance and doorways at the beginning and close of the play, he did not again see the girl whose face and voice haunted him; and it is probable—though not very likely, for Nina's face was not one to be easily torn from one's memory—that he might have forgotten her, if the long arm of coincidence had not been stretched out in grim irony to draw closer the links of the chain.

It chanced a week later that Nina was standing on the edge of the curb, in the middle of Bond Street, wait- ing to cross. She was not in any hurry, for she was thinking of the last act of the play; and she was looking absently before her, when she felt something brush past her skirt, and saw a child attempt to run between the carriages. It was a London urchin of the usual type, and there is no doubt that he would have threaded his way safely amongst the horses if an old lady who was standing beside Nina had not uttered an exclamation of ter- ror and apprehension. The child heard it, turned to look, having not the faintest suspicion that he was the cause, and in another moment he would have been under a victoria if Nina had not sprang forward and hauled him out of the way.

The coachman had pulled up his horse almost on its haunches and, very red in the face, was trying not to swear; and Nina heard a very soft and sweet, and at that moment a very anxious, voice exclaim:

"Oh—the child! Have you run over it?"

"Oh, Sutcombe!" she exclaimed. "We've had an accident—well, scarce- ly an accident. The victoria nearly ran over a boy—and we've got him in the next room. Wait a moment! I'm sure we should have killed him if a young girl had not sprang for- ward and saved him. Such a lovely creature, Sutcombe!"

"The boy?"

"No, no! Don't be silly! The girl. The most charming, lovable girl I've ever seen. And so brave! The horse was nearly touching her, in- deed, I thought she must be knocked down. And so calm, and—and se- rene, amidst all the fuss."

"You seem to have discovered a paragon," he said, with a smile. "Where is she, gone?"

"No, in the next room. I had the greatest difficulty in keeping her. The boy's there—we're seeing if he's hurt!"

"A street arab, I suppose? Don't alarm yourself; you can't hurt 'em. And the young lady—have you put her in the glass case? Let us go and look at this rare specimen."

He drew her arm within his and led her into the next room; that is, as far as the door; there he stop- ped short and stared—his face very red—at Nina, who was standing with loosely clasped hands looking, with very little alarm, at the child.

Vivienne looked up at him with surprise.

"Why—what is the matter, Sut- combe?" she enquired in a low voice; then she stopped short and looked from Nina to him, for Nina had turned and was regarding him with a blush, and a surprise almost as marked as his own.

Sutcombe recovered his presence of mind almost immediately, and coming forward said quietly, but with a smile of pleasure in his frank eyes:

"How do you do, Miss Wood! What a strange coincidence! I mean—"

"Then you know— This is your Miss Wood!" The exclamation broke from Vivienne involuntarily.

Sutcombe colored at the "your."

"I have told my sister of our meet- ing the other night, Miss Wood," he said. "I hope you are not hurt. No? And the boy? Let me see."

After a moment's examination and a question or two, which the boy answered promptly enough—he was dealing with a man now—Sutcombe looked up with a smile. "I think a and sweet, and at that moment a very anxious, voice exclaim:

"Oh—the child! Have you run over er it?"

By this time Nina had got the urchin on the pavement, and she looked up and saw that the enquiry had come from a very pretty, delicate-looking lady in the victoria.
The usual crowd and policeman almost shut Nina and the rescued one from Vivienne's view, but at last she caught Nina's eye and beckoned to her anxiously. Nina went to the carriage, still half consciously grabbing the boy.

"Oh, is he hurt? How brave of you! How very brave!" said Vivienne, fervently. "Is he hurt?"
"No, I don't think so," said Nina.
"If he would only leave off crying—"
"Will you—would you mind—bringing him in, here?" asked Vivienne, timidly. "I—I am an invalid and cannot get out, or I wouldn't trouble you."

Before Nina could reply the boy seized so good a chance of escaping an interview with his natural foe, the policeman, and of his own accord, slipped into the victoria.

"There is nothing the matter with him," said Nina, and with a slight bow she was turning away, when Vivienne said eagerly, almost impulsively:

"Oh, won't you come in, too? Do, do, please! I—I am not at all sure you are not hurt. I live quite near here—if you would come."

Nina hesitated a moment, then got in; the policeman took Lady Vivi-enne's address from the coachman, and the victoria drove off.

The boy was still rubbing his eyes with his dirty fists, but he was eying the two ladies with monkey-like cunning, and, shrewdly concluding that he had landed in clover, kept up an assumption of much grief and tribulation.

"Poor little fellow!" said Vivienne, leaning forward and stroking his arm rather gingerly. "If he would only tell us whether he is hurt or not!" Then she turned her attention to Nina. "How quick you were! It was like—like a cat springing for a kitten—but that sounds rude!" as Nina's eyes twinkled. "And how strong, as well as brave, you must be to be able to lift so big a boy!
And the horse did not touch you!"
"Not in the least," said Nina.
"And now, if you will kindly stop the carriage I will get out—and take this young gentleman with me."

But at this Vivienne looked very hurt and injured.

"Oh, please don't! Please come home with me. I live at Eversleigh Court. Why, we are nearly there!
Your dress is muddled—you can't walk home like that! My maid will clean it—besides, we don't really know that the child is all right. Oh, please come!"

It was hard to resist the pleading voice and wistful eyes, so Nina yielded, though she was anxious to avoid making new acquaintances.

A footman helped Lady Vivienne to alight, and the two ladies and the boy went up the lift to the flat, where they were immediately surrounded by the curious and rather amazed servants.

"Hurt! Oh, poor, dear little boy!
Where!" exclaimed Vivienne's maid, kneeling before the urchin, who responded to her anxious enquiries with a low howl indicating excruciating pain. There was a chorus of "Oh's" from the maids; and, in the confusion, Lord Sutcombe's step was heard to pass into the other room. Vivienne knew the step, and helping herself by the chairs and the wall, limped out.

AND THE BOY? Let me see.

After a moment's examination and a question or two, which the boy answered promptly enough—he was dealing with a man now—Sutcombe looked up with a smile. "I think a good meal and—" he slipped something into the grimy hand, which closed over it instantly—"will be all the surgery needed. Take him away, Cook."

The boy, grinning like a chifpanzee, was led away, and Sutcombe, quite casually, though his heart was beating fast, besought Nina to sit down, for Vivienne was still half dazed by the surprise.

"Yes; yes, oh, yes!" she said, eagerly. "The tea is coming, and you must want a cup so badly! And your dress—we have thought of nothing but the boy! How indifferent you must think us! Sutcombe, if you had seen Miss Wood—"

"I can imagine the scene," said Sutcombe in a low voice. "I know how calm and self-possessed Miss Wood can be in moments of difficulty.
I'll be back in a moment, Vivienne."

He went into the next room and stood quite still looking at nothing for a few moments. He wanted to realize that she was here, in the next room, to obtain full control over himself, to be able to move and speak as if his heart were beating with its normal pulse. When he returned the tea was on, and the two girls were chatting pleasantly. It was evident that the discovery that her girl hero was "the Miss Wood of the theatre" had not changed Vivi-enne's admiration of, and liking for Nina.

A WOMAN'S WISDOM.

The worried mother wakes up to hear her baby's heavy breathing—a little cough—perhaps the croup or whooping cough. She does not want to send for the doctor when perhaps the trouble does not amount to much. Finally she thinks of that medical book her father gave her, The Common Sense Medical Adviser, by R. V. Pierce, M. D. She says "just the thing to find out what is the matter with the little dear." Two million households in this country own one—and it's to be had for only 31c. in stamps—1,000 pages in splendid cloth binding. A good family adviser in any emergency. It is for either sex. This is what many women write Dr. Pierce—in respect to his "Favorite Prescription," a remedy which has made thousands of melancholy and miserable women cheerful and happy, by curing the painful womanly diseases which undermine a woman's health and strength.

MRS. ZUEBERT AND BABE.

"My desire is to write a few lines to let you know what your valuable medicine has done for me," writes Mrs. MARGARET ZUEBERT, of 323 S. Bentalon Street, Baltimore, Md. "Before the stork came to our house I was a very sick woman. I wrote you for advice which was kindly given and which made me a different woman in a short time. After taking the first bottle of 'Favorite Prescription' I began improving so that I hardly knew I was in such a condition. I did my own housework—washing and ironing, cooking, sewing, and the worst of all nursed three children who had whooping cough. I hardly knew of the advent ten minutes before—so easy was it. The baby is as fat as a butter-ball. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the best medicine for any woman to take when in this condition. I recommend it to all my friends."

Judge Leaves Faulty Will.

It is strange how many talented judges and lawyers have failed to draw up their own wills correctly. The English Judge Lushington, who died recently, leaving an estate of nearly $100,000, overlooked the important necessity of having his will and a codicil to it properly attested. Perhaps he intended that his professional colleagues should benefit indirectly by the consequent litigation.

It Was a Dog.

Mr. George Smedley, the Toronto banjo and guitar player, is doing well "across the line" with his big vaudeville act. Mr. Smedley had a thrilling experience while playing a small Ontario town some years ago. It was a fall fair concert, and those who have attended concerts on the evening of the fall fair know that the presence of the "fresh" young man is very much in evidence. During Mr. Smedley's first number he was interrupted by some one whom he thought was imitating a dog yelping. Mr. Smedley stopped his work, advanced to the footlights, and gave the supposed imitator a "piece of his mind." "If that 'dog' up there in the gallery," he said, "will come down here for half a minute I will make him feel like the cur that he is." Then Mr. Smedley resumed his selection. At the conclusion he was generously applauded. Advancing to acknowledge it, Mr. Smedley heard a shrill, childish voice of a boy up in the gallery saying these words: "It was a dog, Mr. Smedley." And to bear convincing testimony, the boy held up a yelping dog by the back of the neck.

Two Great African Explorers.

Funds are being raised in Great Britain for the erection of a striking monument to Mungo Park and Richard Lander, who accomplished epoch-making journeys in West Africa, the former about the beginning of the nineteenth century, the latter thirty years later. As the main object of their travels was to discover where the Niger joined the ocean the site chosen for their monument is Forcados, at the Niger mouth. It is proposed to erect an obelisk of similar design and dimensions to Cleopatra's Needle on a projecting point where it will both attract general attention and serve as a landmark to vessels approaching the port.

SOILED POSTAGE STAMPS.

If They Are Ink Splashed They Won't Do to Put on Letters.

"How dirty can a postage stamp become and still retain its usefulness in the eyes of the government?" was a question propounded to muddle the already overworked brain of a busy man. Happening to meet a postman who was collecting mail, the man handed him a stamped letter.

"That won't go," said the postman. "Stamp's dirty."

As was his wont on special occasions the busy man resorted to sarcasm.

"Since when," he demanded, "did the United States government become so immaculate that it requires none but unsoiled stamps stuck on its letters?"

"Well, they've always been pretty particular," returned the unperturbed postman, "but there are some kinds of dirt that count for more than others. That stamp's got ink on it. Inky stamps don't go because an ink spot could be used to disguise a canceled stamp."

"Then I suppose every stamp I happen to drop a speck of ink on is wasted?"

"Oh, no. Turn it in to the office where you bought it, and after a certain period you will get your money back."

"How long will that take?" the man asked.

"About three months."

"I'm afraid I can't wait," said the man, and over the discredited stamp he stuck a spotless stamp.—New York Times.

SCARS THAT STAY.

They Come From Cuts That Go Down to the True Skin.

There are people who tell you that everything in the body is changed every seven years and that there is no part of it which was there seven years ago. This does not mean that we slough the whole thing off at once, as a snake does its skin or a deer its antlers, but simply that the innumerable and tiny atoms which are used up by the daily wear and tear are replaced by fresh atoms supplied by our food and drink, which keeps the body going, just as coal and water keep the steam engine at work.

PRESS COMMENTS.

Toronto Globe—If he loses Hanna Sir James Whitney will have to let out some of his Cabinet deadwood as well, and reorganize on an adequate scale.

Peterboro Review—The Farmers Bank enquiry resembles the Gamey case in some ways. Everybody is asking the question, "Where did the money go to?"

Winnipeg Free Press—From a casual reading of a Winnipeg newspaper the inference is drawn that the Government of Canada is made up of Mr. Rogers and a number of obedient office hands.

London Advertiser—Mr. Balfour sees a parliament of the Empire coming, and says that local patriotism is no obstacle to a larger patriotism. That is what the Irish homerulers are trying to tell him.

St. Thomas Journal—Premier Borden may visit England this summer. Nobody has yet suggested that it may be for the purpose of consulting Henri Bourassa in regard to a naval policy for the Dominion.

Sydney Record—Out west industries are sought for with eagerness. Get your industries, they say, and prosperity will come as sure as the seasons follow one another. The east is no more wanting in courage than the west.

Vancouver Province—The woman who made it the rule of her life not to worry died in New Jersey last week aged 104 years. The organizers of the "Don't Worry" clubs should experience no trouble in largely increasing the membership.

Canadian Courier, Toronto—Only two men stand between Canada and a Canadian Navy, Sir Hugh Graham, and Mr. Henri Bourassa. Sir Hugh opposes it because he thinks it may lead to separatism, while Mr. Bourassa opposes it because it may prevent separatism.

Kingston Whig—Here's a man—McDonald of Winnipeg—a wholesale grocer, who sells his business for three million dollars. He had branch stores in a dozen cities and did not employ a drummer. He drew the business to him. How? The thousands of business and commercial men would like to know.

Winnipeg Telegram—But heavy crops do not necessarily mean lower prices. Over-production generally brings about this result in other commodities. But wheat is the opportunity of the grain manipulator. Big crops or little, it is all the same. Corners can be made to depress prices to the grain-grower and increase them to the consumer.

Edmonton Bulletin—Col. Sam Hughes has arranged that the clerks in the Government offices at Ottawa may attend militia drill. At the rate the Ministers have been taking on recruits there must be about three men to every job in the offices at present. The drill arrangement will take the

and tiny atoms which are used up by the daily wear and tear are replaced by fresh atoms supplied by our food and drink, which keeps the body going, just as coal and water keep the steam engine at work.

But these changes are so minute and gradual that the form of the body remains the same, although such things as scars take a long time to disappear, and sometimes they remain for life, although they always lose a great deal of their prominence.

You have noticed that if you cut your finger slightly it will soon heal up and the scar will soon disappear, just as the marks of a superficial burn will gradually go away, but if the cut is deep the scar remains. This is because it went down to what is called the true skin. Any cuts or burns on the outer skin are gradually pushed up and worn or washed off, just as the hair on the back of your head wears off without your cutting it and grows again, but anything that goes down to the true skin, like tattoo marks, always remains.—New York Sun.

Punishing Bachelors.

This punishment of the bachelor has been common in many ages and countries and extended down to the early days of our own history. In Connecticut in 1636 a law was passed which would not "allow any young unmarried man to keep house," and Hartford taxed "lone men 20 shillings a week" for the "selfish luxury of solitary living." In 1682 a special town order gave permission for two bachelors to keep house together, "so they carry themselves soberly and do not entertain idle persons to the evil expense of time by day or night," while as late as the eighteenth century a general statute of Connecticut forbade any householder under penalty of a fine to "give entertainment or habitation to single persons without special allowance of the selectmen."—Forum.

First Come, First Served.

On the way back the woman asked:

"Why didn't you stop at the sixth floor? The sixth floor is lower than the ninth."

"I know that," said the elevator boy.

"But the man said ninth first."—Ladies' Home Journal.

Hughes has arranged that the clerks in the Government offices at Ottawa may attend militia drill. At the rate the Ministers have been taking on recruits there must be about three men to every job in the offices at present. The drill arrangement will take the surplus out of the road for a while and let the rest catch up with the work.

Guelph Herald—It will never do, however, to have Canadian courts of justice used as the vehicle for such exploitation; there are other ways of exposing such false pretences. No sympathy with the accused would have been felt had the court displayed greater severity. Had the men alone had dared adopt such methods this would probably have been meted out to them.

Quebec Chronicle—There is no use in trying to disguise the fact that the Opposition is badly beaten. We might spend a lot of time in making excuses, but the fact remains. The people of Quebec have signified their approval of the Gouin Government and are of the opinion that its record justifies another lease of power. Under the circumstances the only thing to be done is to defer to the popular decision.

Ottawa Free Press—It is surprising to see the spirit of resentment which has developed in the west as a result of the overruling of the decision of Judge Mabey in the Hazelton townsite case. The opinion is general that it was a tactical mistake for the Cabinet to interfere, because it removes the safeguard of independence from Government control which was the distinguishing mark of the Railway Board during the Liberal regime.

Kingston Standard (Conservative)—The Conservatives of Halifax are the latest to raise their voice in protest against the patronage system—or rather against the manner in which it is being administered. This publicity, coming immediately after the declaration of Hon. Geo. E. Foster that "the patronage evil is damnable" will probably lead both Mr. Foster and other members of the Cabinet to conclude that while Mr. Foster's language may have been somewhat unparliamentary it was at least none too vigorous or forcible.

Mount Forest Confederate—In the present age there are signs of degeneration and decay in the home. In the mad pursuit of wealth and fashion and pleasure it is being too much neglected by those responsible for its health. Parents are too willing and ready to pass their responsibilities over to others, and they quickly find fault with school, or church, or Sunday school, if there is a lack in the training given with proper effect by the parents themselves. School, Church and Sunday school are invaluable adjuncts of the home, not by any means substitutes therefor.

measure to the help of the "When 'Dizzy's' wife did he referred to her as a wife." Like Mrs. Gladys Salisbury, however, take a great interest in politics; but each of them proved themselves ideal hostesses and helpmates they had married. Their was to leave their husbands in the shape of distraction and seldom did "Dizzy" or stone go to St. Stephen's pained by their wives, who to their creature comforts would a child.

There is no doubt that hostess rules very largely and, indirect, wins far more than the female seeks to sway the voters platform. Ladies like Mrs. Lyttleton, the Duchess of Buccleuch, and the Countess of by working quietly for the benefit of the parties to which attached in salon and a great work in politics. To perform many social duties to an election. They know the value of neglecting calls upon their time and by local affairs. Concert bazaars, fetes, and sports find in them ready patron porters, while they take interest in such organizations as the Primrose League and the National Liberal Association.

Leading political host have the responsible duty of the interests of their and parties by extending to principal members of the lat hospitality. The political and entertainments held down House, for instance, equalled in regard to music and brilliance, and to seduction to one of them is much coveted by young men. Then again, the position of Mrs. Crewe as a political hostess gathered from the fact that she held a reception at House on behalf of the Lady Lady Crewe, who is the daughter of Lord Rosebery, exceedingly clever, tactful, woman, and has proved of great service to her husband in work.

There has been a tendency the younger political hostesses years to also assist their parties by appearing on the platform. And at times we have seen Austen Chamberlain, Mrs. I. Mrs. McKenna, Mrs. Winston Churchill, Mrs. F. E. Smith, Mr. George, and even Miss Violet making speeches on burning questions of the day.

The wife of the Chancellor Exchequer is a very clever and efficient speaker. She speaks the aid of notes, has perfect possession, and is gifted with musical voice. When she speaks to Welsh audiences she cheers by speaking in Welsh.

It is not often, of course, that a politician wins an "off her own bat," so to speak, the manner that Mrs. Alington did when her husband, candidate for Speaker Peel's Warwick and Leamington, in ill; but there are not many politicians who possess that political energy, and brilliant.

leton. She addressed public meetings in speeches which were gems in the way of conciseness and freshness, and was generally one too many for the heckler. "Go home to your old man; we don't want any petticoats here!" shouted a grey-bearded, elderly man at one of the meetings. Quick as a flash came the retort: "Good manners seem to be at a premium amongst the greybeards."

Then there was Mrs. Seely, who secured her husband's return as representative for the Isle of Wight at a time when he was serving in South Africa. "My husband has gone to fight for you, so you must vote for him," she told the electors, and they did to such good purpose that Col.
Seely found himself at the top of the poll.

It is interesting to note, by the way, that over a century ago titled

STRANGE BEDS.

In Germany a Person Should Be an Acrobat to Sleep Well.

Habit conceals all sorts of absurdities. It makes one ache to see an illustration of a Japanese sleeping block, hollowed out just enough to permit of the neck being adjusted thereto. The Germans' notion of night repose does not come much nearer our idea of comfort. There are many ill made and unsatisfactory beds (from the American point of view) to be found in the Kalser's dominions.

German beds, almost without exception, are single—so much so, indeed, that the occupant, if he attempts to deviate an inch or two from his position, finds himself sprawling on the floor.
The sheets, bed blankets, etc., are made just to fit the beds and are never wide enough to tuck in. They are seldom more than an inch or two wider than the mattress, and it requires the skill and experience of an acrobat, especially in the case of a foreigner, to keep the bedclothes evenly balanced over one.

Many of the German hotels use the French pillow, which is about half the size of the mattress and stuffed out so hard and plump that about the only benefit the tired traveler gets from it is to have it serve as a rest for his back while he sleeps in a sitting position.
The majority of pillows found in Germany, however, are wedge shaped, of the same material as the mattress, and come to a point near the center of the bed. On these the sleeper (if he sleeps) rests on an inclined plane and looks like a body on one of the narrow planks in the morgue in Paris, with a sheet thrown over it.—Harper's Weekly.

Some Consolation.

The man who sometimes spoke his thoughts aloud had been more concerned with the things of the world than with things spiritual. One day by chance his hand fell upon a book containing the catechism of a certain Protestant church, and he was soon earnestly engaged in reading the Ten Commandments. For some time he pondered over the "Thou shalt's" and "Thou shalt not's," which had been forgotten almost since childhood. Then laying down the book, with a sigh, he muttered, "Well, I've never killed anybody, anyway."—Everybody's.

Funny Man.

Henri Bergson in his recent book,
"Laughter," lays stress on the fact that man, long defined as "the laughing animal," is also the only laughable animal. There is nothing really comical except human beings. The animal world is solemn beside the so called lords of creation. Man alone is an object of ridicule.

WORLD OVER.

Nearly Shot by Proxy.

In 1862 M. Clemenceau served two months' imprisonment for shouting "Vive la Republique!" and in 1871 he was very nearly shot by proxy. He returned to Paris from a provincial speechmaking tour on the day on which Thiers and the Versailles succeeded in entering the city. Blood was up, and his enemies were looking for him. A young Brazilian who resembled him was arrested in mistake for him and conducted to La Pelliniere to be executed. Happily, however, he shouted for the Brazilian consul, and the Brazilian consul turned up in time to rescue him.

Heredity Among Musicians.

Heredity was perhaps never better exemplified than in the case of the famous composer Beethoven, the son of a tenor, who was the son of a bass.
Bach came of a family of humble musicians, beginning, it is said, with a miller. Haydn's father was an amateur harpist in humble life. Mozart was the son of an ordinary capellmeister and teacher of the violin. The father of Rossini was a horn player in a strolling company.

Agreeing on a Point.

"I wish you could make my wife look on the bright side of things."
"Perhaps there is no bright side to her life."
"Nonsense! Hasn't she got a home and a husband?"
"That's what I was thinking of—her husband."—Houston Post.

And one must not forget to mention Mrs. Cornwallis-West, the mother of Mr. Winston Churchill, who has always been a keen political worker. It was when she was fighting for her husband, the late Lord Randolph Churchill, and Mr. Burdett-Cutts in Westminster, in 1885, that she said to a doubtful voter: "I hope you will vote for the Constitutional cause and support the Queen and the Conservative party." "Well," replied the man, "if I could get what the Duchess of Devonshire once gave for a vote, I think I could promise." "Thank you, very much," said Lady Randolph demurely. "I will tell Lady Burdett-Cutts."

Houses Keep London Warm.

The temperature of the air in the metropolis is raised by the artificial sources of heat existing in it no less than two degrees on the annual mean above that of its immediate vicinity. Mr. Howard, in his work on climate, has fully established this fact by a comparison of a long series of observations made at Plaistow, Stratford, and Tottenham Green (all within five miles of London) with those made at the apartments of the Royal Society in London, and periodically recorded in the Philosophical Transactions. In explanation, Mr. Howard refers to the heat induced by the populations (just as the temperature of a hive of bees), and from the domestic fires, and from the foundries, breweries, steam engines, and other manufactories.—Curiosities of London.

The Tailor Bird.

An extraordinary nesting habit is that of the tailor bird of India, which makes a leaf at the extremity of a slender twig its cradle. If the leaf is large enough, the bird draws the edges together so as to form a pouch. Otherwise, another growing near it is sewn to it with vegetable fibres. The nest consists of fine down, fibres, and a few feathers. An excellent specimen is to be seen in the museum of the Zoological Society.

Jersey Cabbages.

The tallest cabbages in the world are to be seen at Jersey. Some specimens attain the enormous height of 10 feet. Nearly everyone who visits Jersey brings home a walking stick made from the dried stalk of a Jersey cabbage.

Consideration.

"If anybody gave you tainted money would you keep it yourself or send it to the foreign missions?"
"Keep it myself, of course. Would you have me spread infection?"

Changes to be Made Next Session Will be Drastic and Thoroughly Eliminate the System.

The anti-treating law which will be introduced by the government at the next session will be far-reaching in its effect. The new legislation, it is understood, will be of a drastic nature, and will thoroughly eliminate the treating system, which was criticised so severely by Sir James Whitney on the floor of the house two months ago.

The hotelkeeper, the bartender, the man who buys drink, and the man who is given the treat, will be prosecuted under the new law. The tentative plans are designed to reach every person who may commit an offence under the anti-treating law. It is believed that by this means the habit will be discouraged more than if action were taken against the hotelkeepers' license.

The anti-treating law, which in all probability will be incorporated, in an amendment to the Liquor License Act, will impose heavy fines upon the hotelkeepers who violate the law for the first and second time, and on the third occasion the license will be canceled. The bartender will likely be fined to the amount of $100 to $200, and the "treator" and "treated" will be dealt with in a similar way.

LIBERALS TRIUMPHED. IN ALBERTA.

The returns from the five provincial bye-elections Monday, four of which were for new cabinet ministers in the Sifton government, and the fifth to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of the member in Cardston, show a complete sweep for the liberals. The present indications are that the five seats are retained by the supporters of the Sifton administration, though the result in Claresholm, where the provincial treasurer, Malcolm McKenzie, is running, will be very close.

Edmonton — Attorney-General C. W. Cross, has a majority of 593 over A. Ewing, and there are between four and five hundred ballots tied up through protest, a majority of which are claimed for Cross. A socialist, James R. Knight, also ran, but his vote was very small.

Sturgeon — Minister of Education, J. R. Boyle, has a majority of 391, with nineteen polls out of forty-seven heard from, over A. Williamson Taylor. His majority will reach more than 500, the liberals claim.

Sedgewick — Charles Stewart, minister without portfolio, is leading over A. G. Blair, by 140, with twenty-five polls out of 119 heard from. His majority is increasing with almost every return coming in.

Cardston — Martin Woolf, liberal, has a majority of eighty-nine with fifteen polls to hear from, over John F. Parish.

Claresholm — Malcolm McKenzie, provincial treasurer, has a majority of eighteen, with seven small polls to hear from, which, it is claimed, will break even.

The elections were fought in a downpour of rain all over the province. The most strenuous fight was put up in Edmonton. The liberals claim that all the influence of the Dominion government was used in the attempt to defeat the liberal candidates.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, May 27.—At the Montreal Stock Yards, West End Market, the receipts of live stock for the week ending May 25 were 2400 cattle, 425 sheep and lambs, 2750 hogs and 1275 calves. The offerings on the market this morning for sale were 750 cattle, 200 sheep and lambs, 1600 hogs, and 300 calves.

An easier feeling developed in the market and prices were fully 10 to 25c per cwt. lower than this day week, which was attributed to the fact that owing to the high prices ruling of late a good many more drovers were induced to come on here instead of going to Toronto and in consequence the supply was larger than it has been for the past two or three weeks. Really good cattle are scarce and drovers state that it was difficult to pick a carload of such stock up in some sections of the country. The quality of the stock was generally good, but, notwithstanding this fact and the good attendance of buyers, trade was rather slow as the high prices of beef of late have tended to decrease the consumption some, consequently the demand from butchers was principally for small lots. A few full loads of choice steers changed hands at $7.50 to $7.75 and good stock at $6.75 to $7.25 per cwt.

TIMUR RUBY IN EN

Famous Gem Given Up For
In Royal Jewels

It has just become known that the famous Timur ruby, known as the "Tribute of the World," is the British crown jewel. Experts had supposed it was a royal match to the diamond, the "Mountain," which has been in the British crown since 1850.

The Timur ruby is the existence, weighing in shape a trifle over 352 carats, but polished. The count of this ruby is in the Ameer Timur, known as Tamerlane, plundered city of Delhi, and seized stock of princely gems. bequeathed the Timur ruby to his son and successor, Mirza who passed it down to his son, Mirza Ulugh Beg.

The ruby fell into the hands of a Persian king at the downfall of the Tartar Empire. In 1612 it was presented by Shah Abbas, the greatest of the Safavi Kings, to the Mogul Emperor. At that time it had engraved the names of Tamerlane and Shah Abbas. The Emperor ordered it obliterated them and on the ruby the names of his father, Akbar the Great, and his son, Shah Jehan, were put.

Shah Jehan later put his name on the ruby and set the stone in the Peacock Throne. There it remained until Nadir Shah invaded India and sacked Delhi in 1739, carrying off the Timur ruby and other gems. In 1849 it came into the possession of the English, to whom it was given by the Kohinoor.

The Kohinoor was sent to Queen Victoria. The Timur ruby, after having been for some time in the possession of the East India Company, is said also to have been given to the Queen, but got into the royal collection and has been in the possession of the Queen ever since. It was collected by King George IV during his Indian coronation tour.

Excuses of Messenger

Mr. Herbert Samuel, the Postmaster-General, related some amusing stories of excuses of messenger boys at the post office and display of the British Club for Working Lads, in the Lion Theatre, Mile End, recently. In his official capacity, explained Mr. Samuel, he has about 14,000 telegraph messenger boys, and he heard a good deal about their ways. The boys are always very ready to own up to their faults, and if they fell away from their duty, they would always be ready to own up to it.

The postmaster in one instance, upon Messenger Brown for his conduct towards a man in George street. The reply came:

"To the postmaster. I was passing through George street and an old gentleman stood in the way. I threw a potato at the gentleman and he was very sorry, and hope it will not occur again."

Not long ago, continued Mr. Samuel, the written explanation of a boy messenger when there was some disturbance in the office, was:

"Messenger Smith called on me and he was a wooden-head, so I poured him out and punched him on the nose. Hoping this will be your approval."

MELON GROWING.

Fruit Pays if Planted Right and Given Proper Care in Season.

Oh, watermelon time is a-comin' round again.

And there ain't nobody livin' any tickler'n me!

So sang the well loved Hoosier poet, and the sentiment expressed finds a ready echo in the heart of every farmer who has ever grown a patch of one of the most delicious products that good old Mother Nature ever provided for the delectation of mankind, says a writer in the National Stockman and Farmer.

In addition to furnishing an added joy of living to your family and friends (and all the small boys in the neighborhood) a small area devoted to melons will add quite a few dollars to the yearly net income if planted in the proper kind of soil and given the requisite care. Melons require a light, warm soil that is very rich in plant

G feet with good results.

Great care must be taken to meet the striped beetle at the very beginning of his invasion and wage unceasing war until plants have grown beyond danger.

Tobacco dust should be sprinkled over and around the plants after every shower; also occasionally in the morning while dew is on.

Melons should receive frequent though shallow cultivation, especially in dry weather. The one horse garden plow with eight or more shovels is admirable for this purpose, following at once with a light drag of suitable length. This leaves a fine, smooth dust mulch, and the loss of moisture is reduced to a minimum. Make frequent and thorough use of the hoe and regard every weed as your personal enemy.

If you have never grown a melon crop before, well meaning friends will, no doubt, advise letting weeds grow after cultivation is over in order to shade melons. Take such advice gently but very firmly by the neck and lead to nearest exit. It must be remembered that melons are not a lazy man's crop, must have attention at the needed time and not three days or a week later.

One cannot joy ride on a manure spreader, but in many ways it is more useful than an automobile.

Orchard and Garden.

The newly married man who will set out an asparagus patch this spring plants not only for himself and his children, but also for his grandchildren, all from the same roots, if they are kept well mulched with manure.—Iowa Homestead.

When you plant strawberries or any other crop which is very easily destroyed by tramping put the last three or four plants in rows across the ends and save much tramping and loss. Besides this the rows make it easy for cultivation right up to the ends.

Mulching is used to prevent moisture from evaporating out of the soil in summer or to prevent frost from penetrating to the roots in winter. In summer a mulch is often given to trees and shrubs newly transplanted and to herbaceous plants that are impatient of heat about the roots.

The Workman in England.

The average workman in England gets only $5 a week, and the cost of living is not commensurately less; in fact, 50 cents will go only as far as $1 would in this country. This, naturally, does not put the workingman in a position of ease, for he gets only what is the equivalent of $10 a week here, which is about the minimum on which life can be supported. The farm laborer and others less skilled get even less, many of them supporting a family on $2.50 a week.

Left-Handedness.

The question as to whether left-handedness is inherited is still doubtful, but a man of science has investigated seventy-eight families, dealing with 3,000 individuals, and his evidence goes to show, says Prof. J. Arthur Thompson, that the trait passes from father to son.

food, especially nitrogen, and that has good natural drainage. A deep, rich sandy loam underlaid with a substrata of gravel is best.

The ground should be finely pulverized and made smooth by dragging. Do not be afraid of using the drag too much. Watermelons should be planted not less than twelve feet apart and rows marked out so as to cultivate both ways. The larger varieties of muskmelon should be planted eight feet apart, but the small cantaloupes, such as Gem, Rocky Ford and others of like character, may be planted 6 by

It became known that the great ruby, known in the Mogul Empire as the "Mountain of Light," is now among the crown jewels. Some supposed it was lost. The royal match to the Kohinoor the "Mountain of Light," been in the British regalia our ruby is the largest in the world weighing in its present state over 352 carats. It is a deep red, polished. The first acquisition of the ruby in 1398, when the Timur, known in Europe as Tamerlane, plundered the Indian Empire, and seized a great number of gems. Tamerlane gave the Timur ruby to his successor, Mir Shah Rukh, who carried it down in turn to his son, Ulugh Beg.

It fell into the hands of a Persian prince at the downfall of the Timurid Empire. In 1612 the stone was acquired by Shah Abbas I., the Sofavi King of Persia. The Mogul Emperor Jehangir, who had engraved on it the names of Tamerlane and his son Abbas. The Emperor Jehangir ordered them and engraved by the names of himself and Akbar the Great.

Shah Jahan later put his name on the stone in the famous Throne. There it remained until Shah Jahan's son, Aurangzeb, invaded India and took Delhi in 1739. He carried the Timur ruby and 25,000 other jewels to his new capital at Delhi.

In 1849 it came into possession of the English, together with the Kohinoor. The Kohinoor was sent direct to England. The Timur ruby, which had been for some time in the hands of the East India Company, also to have been sent to England, but got into the private hands of a man who had been lost to the British since. Its history was given by King George on his accession to the throne.

When Teacup Washing Becomes a Ceremony of Importance.

CHINAWARE TO BE BOILED.

Hints For the Summer Bungalow. Save Your Silk Pieces and Have Them Made Up Into Handsome Rug-Phonograph in Kindergarten.

My Dear Elsa—I was having tea the other afternoon with a charming lady of my acquaintance.

"I never tasted such delicious tea in my life," I said, passing my cup for a second supply. "Is it because you make it yourself or because you warm the cups?"

"It's the cups themselves," she said confidentially. "They add a glory to the tea. That's just it and all about it."

I looked at my cup critically—creamy white with the lovely smooth surface of a polished pearl. A border of tiniest roses in dull pinky brown bordered the top, and the burnished edge showed no sign of chip or crack.

"Used every day for twenty years, dearie," she said gayly, "but always washed by myself."

"Does the tea ever stain them?" I asked, thinking of my own pretty egg-shell set.

"Why, of course. A little common salt applied with the fingers quickly removes any stain from fine china, and a tiny brush used occasionally will keep the handles and the grooves at the bottom of the cups beautifully clean."

"My set is so fragile I am almost afraid to touch them," I said.

"They are sweet," my dear old friend was good enough to say. You know the set, don't you, Elsa, dear, the old Spode that belonged to Aunt Eliza, which she bequeathed to me with much fear and trembling?"

"Well," my old friend continued, "I've been longing to ask whether you boiled them before you took them into everyday use."

"Boiled!" I gasped. "Boiled them?"

"Yes, surely, boiled. It was one of my mother's little ways, and I always carry it out. Delicate china isn't half so likely to crack or chip after it has been boiled."

So I asked for all information instantaneously, and here it is:

"Wrap the separate pieces in soft old cloths, set them carefully in a shallow pan—a deep saucepan does nicely—cover with cold water and let the water come slowly to a boil and let them boil for ten minutes and they are done," said my friend triumphantly.

"Do you use soap or soda in your washing up water?" I asked.

"A very little flaked soap," was the reply. Then she continued, "I am most particular about the drying and polishing, and I keep soft old damask cloths for the purpose."

"Your china washing is quite a ceremony," I said, thinking wistfully of the good old days when women really had time to attend to the washing of their best china. Now one is off at

An Early Acquired Habit.

It saves time and eyesight to do as little basting as possible for machine sewing. In making up supplies of clothes such as underwear, school dresses, etc., it is worth while to baste and fit accurately one of each thing, then rip it apart and trim all the rest to its exact proportions.

Begin sewing on the straight seams, so as to accustom yourself to simply hold your work together. It is no trick at all once you catch the hang of it. Fold down hems and crease tucks, keeping them flat and smooth under the presser foot as you sew. Gather on the machine and regulate the fullness properly and you can sew the gathers the same as a plain seam. Even sleeves can be held in as they are sewed, but this is after one is expert. At first it is best to baste them. Cultivate likewise the habit of running off one seam on to another. With light stuff hold a strip of paper underneath while sewing and tear it off afterward. Wherever possible use the English bag seam. It is neat and strong and lends itself beautifully to no basting.

“Your china washing is quite a ceremony,” I said, thinking wistfully of the good old days when women really had time to attend to the washing of their best china. Now one is off attending a club meeting, a suffragette talk or a bridge game, and the family china is being smashed by whatever it pays when one has valuable china, which I know you possess in distract-

Save Your Silk Pieces.

I have recently found out, too, that it is a wise rule never to throw away old silk pieces, no matter how disreputable in appearance, so long as there is any hold together to the fabric.
I don't mean good sized pieces of new materials which can be utilized in many ways for fancy work and dress accessories, but to discarded silk founces, old sleeves, badly worn silk waists that are far past any renovating. Perhaps you don't know it, but ancient ribbons that have been cleaned if too soiled for use make fine material for woven rugs.

In a certain summer bungalow, the charm of which lingers with every one who has the good fortune to share its broad and hospitable shelter, there are plenty of pretty and artistic rugs woven by a little German woman living in the neighborhood from material furnished her by the girls of this particular family, who have actual old fashioned “carpet rag parties” during the winter evenings with a view to the decking of their beloved “candle cottage.” But over the banister rail and on the broad couches and window seats are lighter and richer looking rugs, and one handsome rug lies across the big center table, where all gather to read on stormy nights.

These were made out of old silk scraps cut into strips, sewed together and wound into balls by these same ingenious girls and woven by the same little Deutsche frau into thoroughly desirable rugs, than which nothing could harmonize more perfectly with the genuine old antique fireirons, all of which were rummaged out of a ver-table old “family attic,” where they had lain unused since the grandmother of these same girls was young herself. No oriental fabrics could have half the harmonious effect in combination with the old furnishings, which are genuinely American. It is easy to think out a color scheme for summer furnishings before the balls of silk are wound.

Any weaver of ordinary rag rugs is able to turn out the prettier silk ones and can tell exactly how much silk by weight it will take to weave a rug of any desired size, and the results are durable, handsome and well worth the trouble of saving, cutting and sewing the strips of silk and winding the balls.

Here is a suggestion, Elsa, dear, that I would like to have you pass on to that chum of yours who directs the kindergarten in your town. You have often told me how hard it is for her to find an assistant who could properly interpret the songs and marches for the children. A director of a kindergarten here in New York has solved the problem by using a phonograph.
Now, the music is played in perfect excellent thing to fasten loosened ivory handles to knives.

To serve toast daintily and save crumbs cut it in strips when preparing it. It is more tempting and nicer to handle.

To keep cream sweet heat it almost to the boiling point and then put it in a glass bottle or earthen vessel, cover it and set it aside to cool. Thus treated it will keep fresh several days in moderate weather and over the second day in warm weather.

To economize on soap either put the broken pieces in a small cloth bag and use for washing dishes and in scrubbing or chip them fine and melt in a little water on the stove. In the latter case by allowing the soft soap to come to a decided boil and adding a little borax you can fashion a solid cake of soap by pouring it into an old cup or dish to cool.

To keep feather dusters in good condition push them, handle first, into the leg of an old stocking. When wanted for use pull it out of the cover by the handle, grasping the stocking in the other hand. This not only saves space when the dusters are not in use, but lengthens their life and serviceable-ness.

As a substitute for a hot water bottle heat an old magazine in the oven. It will retain the heat for a very long time and will lie well against large surfaces.

Far-Famed Scotland Yard.

Scotland Yard is the name applied to the building in which the London police have their headquarters. The police headquarters building stood originally at the corner of Charing Cross, in London, and it was called Scotland Yard because a long time ago, when Scotland had Kings of its own, there used to be a palace at this same corner of Charing Cross, where the Scottish Kings could get rooms free when they came down to London. After the death of Queen Elizabeth, the Scotch King James II. came down to London to be King of England, and Scotland Yard was no longer necessary.

Scotland Yard acquired so much business that it was necessary to move into a new house about 1890.
This new house was—and still is—on the Thames embankment. It is a huge red brick building and looks like a City Hall. It was nowhere near the original Scotland Yard, but the British had grown accustomed to the name, and as it had no earthly connection it was, of course, retained.
The new headquarters were called New Scotland Yard, while the Charing Cross building was still referred to as Old Scotland Yard.

An Eye-Biting Snake.

In India for centuries this extraordinary long-snouted whip-snake has been known to the natives as apt to strike at the eye, and their story has been substantiated by an English naturalist, who was bitten in the eye by one he was handling. No harm resulted, as the bite only took effect on the instinctively-closed eyelids, and the snake is not venomous, while the pointed end of the nozzle is soft and harmless. This reptile always strikes for the face, and will not bite any object thrown before it like most snakes.

Fish Buried Alive.

The African lung or mud fish sometimes attains a length of six feet. It is very abundant on the Gambia river, and there, during the dry season, lasting through August and September, the fish buries itself in a burrow in the mud, remaining for quite a long period in a dormant condition, being nourished by a large store of fat that has been collected in the body.
When the dry season has passed the fish again takes to the water, in which it can swim with exceeding rapidity.

Jackdaw as Scholar.

In the little village of Upton, in Berkshire, England, there is a twelve-year-old boy who has so trained a jackdaw that he can take it to school with him, and the bird will sit upon his desk during lessons. None of the other boys take any notice of this strange scholar, so used have they got to its presence.

It looks as if the trustees of the Carnegie library fund will refuse to take up the scheme to give a grant to Queen's University and allow one library to be used as a public library.
Kingston has no desire to have a library entirely for its own use.

THEY DON'T CARE.

U. S. Can Intervene If It Likes, Say Cuban Rebels.

London, May 28.—That neither charity nor punishment can effect the banishment of the social evil, the question being an economic one, was the assertion of Miss Flora McD.
Denison at yesterday afternoon's session of the National Council of Women, in speaking on the report on the equal moral standard and the prevention of traffic in women.

The report prepared by Mrs. Gordon of Ottawa, and read by Mrs. Plumptre, said the "older sister" movement was being tried out successfully in London and other cities.

Moving picture shows were blamed as a cause of girls going wrong, because they were used as places of appointment between girls and men of questionable character.

The report recommended the raising of the age of consent to 18 years, increased stringency in dealing with offenders under the criminal code affecting offences against women, and the supervision of boarding houses.

One report stated that 15,000 girls were imported into the United States and Canada for immoral purposes annually and that three times that number of native-born girls also became victims of the social evil. Annually in New York and Chicago, 1,500 girls disappear from social life.
To stop the traffic in women it must be made unprofitable.

Mrs. Denison declared that the cause of prostitution was absolutely an economic one. Girls desired to dress attractively and could not do it on present-day wages. Technical training in the public schools was urged as a remedy.

Mrs. Shortt thought a large number

FOR FLETCHER'S
CASTORIA

An economic one. Girls desired to dress attractively and could not do it on present-day wages. Technical training in the public schools was urged as a remedy.

Mrs. Shortt thought a large number of girls who fall are defective. Having once fallen, in order to support their children, they fall again. Baby farm keepers exacted exorbitant charges.

Margaret Gordon dealt with the care of illegitimate children. The state should be made responsible, she claimed. Baby farms should be taken over and run by the Government. This would do away with child murder. Babies would no longer be found in alleys and under the snow in the spring. Such a condition of things as existed at present was disgraceful.

The following resolution was moved by Mrs. Leathes and seconded by Mrs. Denison:

"Resolved that this national council of women of Canada heartily endorses the plan of having a national committee affiliated with the international bureau for the suppression of the white slave traffic, and that the sub-committee be authorized to confer with the executive committee of the Moral and Social Reform Committee of Canada as to the formation of this national committee and to take what further steps may be necessary in this matter."

Dickson Is Held.

Brockville, May 28.—When Chief Burke called on Inspector of Detectives Hughes of New York on Saturday, and presented the warrant calling for delivery to Brockville of J. L. Dickson, wanted here on a charge of theft of $904.33 from the International Securities Co., he was told that he could not be delivered unless extradition papers, properly signed, were given him. The Brockville chief was accompanied by V. B. Powis of Montreal, general manager of the company, and the two were taken greatly by surprise, as Dickson was being held on the warrant made out here and his telegram to the Brockville chief was taken as indication that Dickson was being held awaiting his arrival.

Chief Burke returned yesterday without Dickson, and said he did not know what would be done. Dickson is quite willing to return here and face the charge, so Chief Burke learned.

Nurses Rescued Insane Woman.

Kingston, May 28.—Quick action on the part of two nurses of Rockwood Asylum saved the life of a woman patient who tried to commit suicide. Miss May Kirkwood and Miss Sealer had 15 patients out for a walk when one ran away and jumped into the lake. Miss Kirkwood jumped into the water and grabbed the woman as she was going down, when Miss Sealer also leaped in, came to her assistance and the woman was pulled out.

DUKE AT CEREMONY.

He Lays Corner-Stone of New Tuberculosis Institution.

Toronto, May 28.—Weston was enlete yesterday, and large numbers of Toronto people journey out by motor, carriage, tally-ho or trolley car, to the ceremony of the laying of the foundation stone of the new Hospital for Consumptive Children, on the grounds of the Toronto Free Hospital, by His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught. The velvety lawns of the sanitarium grounds were looking their loveliest, and the stand which had been erected to accommodate the distinguished guests was gaily decorated with bunting. Noticeable among the throngs around the stand were the children of the Weston Public School, who had been given a holiday for the occasion.

His Royal Highness left Benvenuto at 10 a.m., accompanied by Col. Low-ther and Capt. and was piloted to the scene of the ceremony by Mr.
James L. Hunt, LL.D., honorary secretary of the National Sanitarium Association.

On the way a stop was made at the works of the Russell Motor Co., where Mr. Russell presented to the sanitarium, through the duke, the sum of $150, on behalf of the employees of the factory, who thronged around the royal motor and gave three hearty cheers to speed the duke on his way, after he had, in a brief speech, thanked them for their generosity and expressed his pleasure at having the opportunity of meeting them.

His Honor Sir John Gibson, Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario, who presided at the ceremonies, said, in the course of his introductory remarks:
"Lord Strathcona is president of the association. I have the honor of being a vice-president, but the real head and front of the movement is Mr.
Gage, who has, from the beginning of this enterprise, the Hospital for Consumptives in Muskoka and the Toronto Free Hospital, all through been the head and front and chief executive of this great philanthropic movement."

W. J. Gage, who followed, gave an interesting address on the progress being made in staying the ravages of the "white plague."

After appropriate prayers had been offered by the Lord Bishop of Toronto, the duke laid the corner-stone.

In the course of his remarks His Royal Highness said:

"It should not be difficult to interest people in the preservation of their own lives and those of their children, but the apathy and obstinacy of the mass of the population is a phenomenon which is an everlasting wonder.

"It is now pretty well established that tuberculosis in its early stages is curable, and it is probably by the sanitarium system that the best results are to be secured. I pray that this new sanitarium may be the means of restoration to health of numbers of your citizens.

"But though you have the sanitoriums, do not forget, and do not let others forget, that prevention is of vital importance. Properly applied methods can stamp out the disease, and I should like to think that some day the Weston Sanitarium should stand here empty, a monument to the good sense of the Canadian public."

Brakeman Is Killed.

Toronto, May 28.—While coupling cars on a freight that was being made up in the G.T.R. yards between Bathurst and Portland street at about 12 o'clock last night, E. Thornton, a married brakeman, employed by the Grand Trunk, whose home is in Belleville, was hit by one of the cars on the backing freight, and falling between two of them was instantly killed.
His body was taken to the morgue, where it will remain until an inquest has been held. His wife and relatives have been communicated with.

New Brunswick's New Minister.

Fredericton, N.B., May 28.—At the meeting of the Provincial Government here last week, it is understood that Hon. Roger Maxwell, who is retiring from politics to accept another position, tendered his resignation as president of the executive council and member of the Government without portfolio.

It is said, in this connection, that John E. Wilson, M.P.P., for St. John, will be called to the vacancy.

Hydro-Aeroplanes to Cross Channel.

Paris, May 28.—The Compagnie Generale Transaerienne announces its decision to establish a service of hydro-aeroplanes between Calais and Dover to enable passengers to cross the channel in about fifteen minutes.

The company announces also that the dirigible Astra will soon inaugurate the new tourist service above Paris and the surrounding country.
The full service will be put in operation shortly.

The Popular Pot Roast.

Many persons object to the mixture of vegetables that go into the ordinary pot roast, but these are in no way necessary. Select for a pot roast a thick piece of round and brown it thoroughly in its own fat until the entire surface is seared and rich in color. Then cover it with a cupful of hot water and cook it very slowly on the back of the stove below the boiling point until it is done tender, turning in a little water now and then when it is needed to keep the meat from actually sticking to the kettle and burning. The kettle should be kept covered tight to keep in the steam. The meat should not be cooked until it falls into pieces, but it should be just tender enough to hold its own when it is cut. The last of the roast will make a delicious ragout.
And a tasty hot supper dish may be made by cutting the meat into slices of medium thickness and frying them in butter. Such a roast is fit to set before a king, provided that particular king has not made up his mind never under any circumstances to eat beef of any kind that does not run red juices.
When the pot roast is done take out the meat, turn it a little hot water and thicken with a tablespoonful each of butter and flour, seasoning with salt and pepper and a little kitchen bouquet if it is wanted.

FEARED HE HAD CONSUMPTION

"Fruit-a-tives" Cured Him

HUGH MCKENNA, Esq.

ST. STEPHEN, N.B. Jan. 17th. 1911.

"I wish to tell you of the great good "Fruit-a-tives" have done for me. For years, I was a martyr to Chronic Constipation and Stomach Trouble. I was greatly run down and my friends feared I had Consumption. I tried numerous doctors and all kinds of medicines, but received no relief until advised to try "Fruit-a-tives" by Mr. McCready of St. Stephen, and am pleased to say that I now enjoy excellent health. "Fruita-tives" are the best medicine made, and I strongly advise my friends to use them".

HUGH MCKENNA.

"Fruit-a-tives" is the only medicine that will positively and completely cure Constipation. This wonderful compound of fruit juices acts directly on the liver, causing this organ to extract more bile from the blood, and to give up more bile to move the bowels regularly and naturally.

Got Judgment for $2,500,000.

Washington, May 28.—One of the largest judgments against an individual ever decreed by the Supreme Court of the United States was that announced yesterday against Albert S.
Bigelow of Boston. He will be called upon to pay a judgment of $2,100,000 together with interest which probably will bring the total to $2,500,000. The victor in the suit is the Old Dominion Copper Mining & Smelting Co. Bigelow and Leonard Lewisohn of New York promoted the company, and while owning its stock, sold to it property at an enormous profit. They then sold their stock to the "innocent public."

CUBAN REBELS FIRM.

They Say They Will Fight Till They Win Their Point.

Santiago, Cuba, May 28.—Generals Estenoz and Iveton, the leaders in the revolutionary rising, have declared their intention to carry on the war, whether the United States intervenes or not, until the Morra law has been repealed. This law provides that there shall be no recognition of political parties on racial lines, and is offensive to the negroes. The insurgent leaders have made the further statement, in the course of an interview with a correspondent who has just returned from the field that they received offers of money from the Cuban Government in consideration of not taking the field, but they refused rather than have the aspirations of the colored race unfulfilled.

No Intervention, Says Taft.
Washington, May 28.—President Taft yesterday sent the following message to President Gomez of Cuba, saying he would not intervene in Cuba: "I am grateful to learn of your Government's energetic measures to put down the disturbance and to know that you are confident of being successful. As was fully explained to the Cuban charge d'affaires here, this Government's motive in sending ships to Key West, just as sending the Prairie to the Guantanamo naval station, was merely to be able to act promptly in case it should unfortunately become necessary to protect American life and property by rendering moral support or assistance to the Cuban Government. As was made quite clear at the time, these ordinary measures of precaution were entirely disassociated from any question of intervention."

Ready to Resume.

Impossible.
"You are going to inherit all my money," said the rich old man.
"Yes," sobbed the youth.
"I wish to goodness I could fix it so that you could also inherit my ability to take care of it," was the old man's last expression.—Detroit Free Press.

A Delicate Position.
"That was an annoying coincidence," said Mr. Biggins. "It took great tact to manage it."
"What's the trouble?"
"The pension examiner and the life insurance doctor both called on me at the same time."—Washington Star.

"Heavy work, severe straining and evil habits in youth brought on Varicose Veins. When I worked hard the aching would become severe and I was often laid up for a week at a time. My family physician told me an operation was my only hope—but I dreaded it. I tried several specialists, but soon found out all they wanted was my money. I commenced to look upon all doctors as little better than rogues. One day my boss asked me why I was off work so much and I told him my condition. He advised me to consult Drs. Kennedy & Kennedy, as he had taken treatment from them himself and knew they were square and skillful. I wrote them and got THE NEW METHOD TREATMENT. My progress was somewhat slow and during the first month's treatment I was somewhat discouraged. However, I continued treatment for three months longer and was rewarded with a complete cure. I could only earn $12 a week in a machine shop before treatment, now I am earning $21 and never loose a day. I wish all sufferers knew of your valuable treatment."

some weeks from typhoid fever and was doing nicely, until a week ago, when complications set in and since that time he had been gradually sinking. Deceased was one of the most active members of Napanee Lodge No.
86, I. O. O. F. and on Tuesday evening was elected from the Lodge to at Grand Lodge. Besides his young widow, who is a daughter of Mr. Lester Scott, he leaves one child, a little son, to mourn the loss of a loving husband and father, cut off in the prime of his early manhood. He also leaves one brother and his mother.
The sympathy of a host of friends goes out to the bereaved widow, and mother and brother. The funeral will take place on Sunday afternoon at

The Foresters' excursion to Picton on Friday morning last was not very largely attended owing to the heavy downpour of rain a few hours previous and at the time of the boat's leaving.

During the electrical storm on Thursday night of last week Mr. George Frisken, of Richmond, had a valuable cow killed. The lightning hit the barn but fortunately did not cause any fire.

Fine weather the last couple of Sundays has made it possible for a large number of our citizens to walk out the Deseronto road until they can view the remains of the Reindeer which is lying sunk in the river.

When painting houses and barns, there are a few important facts to keep in mind. One gallon of Sherwin—Williams specially prepared outside paint will cover 360 square feet, two coats. It will not chalk off like white lead. You use every drop in the can, there is no waste and no time lost in mixing. The Medical Hall—Fred L. Hooper, agent for Napanee.

In September, 1911, Mr. Frank Mills, son of M. B. Mills, was in Toronto bay on board his father's sailing yacht, and for a joke wrote the following on a piece of paper: "Mr. Frank Mills, Napanee, Ont., finder please communicate." He put the paper into a bottle and threw it into the bay. A few days ago he received a post card from Toronto stating that the bottle had been picked up in Humber Bay, near that city.

The sidewalks are made for our citizens to walk on, and the roads are made for bicyclists to ride on, but a good many of the younger element think otherwise (and some of the older ones too). Tuesday evening three citizens, who were caught riding bicycles on the walks, appeared before the magistrate and were fined. It will be well for others, who break the by-law in this respect, to take warning and cut it out. Chief Graham has instructions to stop this habit, and he is going to do it.

Ringling Circus.

Ringling Brothers' Circus and newly added $500,000 spectacle of "Joan of Arc" will exhibit in Kingston, on Friday, June 14th. The spectacle in itself is an attraction that should bring thousands of visitors from the surrounding country. It is beyond question the greatest production of its kind ever seen in America. The world's most skillful scenic artists, costumers, property-makers, chorus directors and stage managers were engaged to mount the production. A stage bigger than a hundred ordinary theatres was built and made portable so that it can be conveyed from town to town and erected each morning in the main tent. Thus the circus proprietors have made it possible for those who live in contributory towns as well as in the large cities to see this magnificent worldless play with its cast of 1,200 characters, a ballet of 300 dancing girls, a grand opera chorus of 400 voices, 600 horses, and a train load of special scenery, costumes, properties and mechanical devices for producing such stage effects as thunder, lightning, storms, fires, and the sound of battle. In the old market place of Rouen, France, there now stands a monument by which the French of to-day have sought to redeem their part in the execution of Joan of Arc, who on May 30, 1431, was burned to death on the false charge of heresy after having delivered her country from the English and having restored the crown to Charles VII. History records but the meagre facts of this strange heroine of eighteen years, who led the armies of France victorious through English invasion, and then, deserted by all, even the indolent monarch whom she preserved, died by the cruelest torture known with the name of the master upon her lips. Unsung in poetry the name of this simple peasant girl has come down through the ages to be revered as that of a saint, and whose wonderful powers and whose bravery are verily believed to have been of divine inspiration. On the triumphant incidents, the victorious engagements, the final defeat of the English armies, and the coronation of Charles VII. all achieved by the frail Maid of Orleans, has been founded the inspiring spectacle which gives Ringling Brothers' circus a new significance and makes an attraction such as the world in searching for amusement has never before found. The regular circus program is more than ever attractive. Its company of 350 foreign artists, its double menagerie and its new street parade will prove a great surprise to those who attend from this county. The event is one that should not be missed.

SEEK TO DESTROY HOME RULE BILL

Cloud of Ingenuous Amendments Mainly Designed to Befog Real Issue—Weeding-out Process.

London, May 28.—(Can. Press).— There have already been handed to the clerk of the house of commons amendments to the home rule bill that fill 28 closely printed pages of the parliamentary orders of the day.
Most of them are in the names of Conservative members, and it would not take the passage of many of them to make the bill as useless as the paper it is printed on. The extreme radical members, on the other hand, aim at giving the Irish parliament more power and making it more democratic while some of their nonconformist colleagues would have clauses inserted to safeguard their fellow religionists of Ulster.

With the exception of Lawrence Ginnell, a Nationalist with independent leanings, the Irish members have not yet tabled any amendments. Mr.
Ginnell's amendments would enlarge the powers of the Irish parliament, and, like those of the Radicals, make it more democratic.

While months will be spent on the committee stage of the bill, few of the amendments will receive a hearing.
The chairman of the committee has the power to choose the amendments that will be considered, his decision being made generally after consulting with the leaders of all parties. Were all those already handed in discussed it would take more than one session of parliament to dispose of them.

Annual Meeting of Woman's Auxiliary.

The annual meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary of the Diocese of Ontario was held in the school room of St.
Mary Magdalene Church on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday of this week. There were representatives from nearly all parishes of the diocese present. The roll call showed that there were present 10 members of the Diocesan Board, 23 life members and 70 presidents and delegates. Tuesday evening was devoted to addresses on junior work. A play was given, called "Our Pledges", by five little girls of the Sunday school, after which addresses were given by Miss Gaciller, of Hamilton, and Miss Rowsence, lately returned from work in the Indian school at Battleford, Sask. On Wednesday was the real commencement or corporate celebration in the church at which there were 100 communicants.
The thank offering on the occasion was $688.49. The preacher, Rev. Dr.
Renison, of Hamilton, formerly of Moosonee, gave an eloquent sermon on missionary zeal and enterprise, showing the necessity of religious duty in the laying of the foundation of our country. By illustration he showed that if in the beginning a plastic period neglect should take place we could not hope for results in the future. After service in the school room an address of welcome was given by Mrs.
Edward Wilson, President of Napanee Branch, which was responded to by Mrs. Kirkpatrick, of Tweed. In the afternoon Miss Macaulay, the President, read her address, also paper by Mrs. A. S. Dickenson, of Newboro on "The Ideal Branch" an addresses by Miss Gaciller, of Hamilton. At a public meeting in the evening the vicar Rev. W. E. Kidd, M. A., chairman, read splendid addresses by Miss Connell, head of church of England Dea-coness House, Toronto, on the work done by that Institution, and by Rev.
Dr. Renison on work among the Indians, around Hudson Bay. His address was most eloquent. The meeting was well attended. On Thursday morning the meeting commenced with reading of missionary Litany on church. This was followed by interesting papers on junior work by several delegates. "Methods of interesting juniors in the study of missions", Mrs.
Savary; "Junior Dorcas work", Mrs.
Mowat; "Legitimate means of raising money", Mrs. Hudspeth; "Our duty and privilege as workers among juniors", Mrs. Cowan. The report of Dorcas secretary showed during year, 57 bales of clothing etc., sent out; 3 cots in hospital of North West and $1,512.00 raised for this work. The financial report showed $3388.00 raised. The secretary's report showed 51 branches senior; 11 girl's branches; 4 juniors; total membership 2029. At the beginning of the meeting a resolution was passed and sent by lettergram to His Lordship, the bishop of Ontario and Mrs. Mills, expressing regret at their enforced absence.
